Provo will take rights to water

RICHARD G. WILKINS
University Staff Writer

A commission moved Monday to take water rights of the Rock Canyon Company, which supplies about 10 percent of Provo's water.

Commissioners passed a resolution remaining 420 shares divided among individuals and groups. BYU owns 48.5 shares in the company.

Weadon estimated that shares in the company are worth approximately $300, plus shareholders disagree.

Wallace D. Hull, a Provo resident owning 36.5 shares in the Rock Canyon

Water Company, estimates the current value at $500 a share.

"The city has been dragging its feet on this thing," said Hull. "They could have had the whole thing 10 years ago for $300 a share, but not now."

Shareholders contacted by the Daily

News were informed after the commission's action, expressed surprise at the sudden action by the city.

Newell Johnson, shareholder, said he didn't expect the city to "take over the whole company."

"We have been negotiating with the city some time now, but to my knowledge it was to trade some shares for continued rights to irrigation water," said Johnson.

The company has used its water primarily for irrigation, although the water comes from covered springs and is is suitable for culinary use.

Weadon said the city will use all suitable water for culinary purposes, cutting use of the water for irrigation.

Grange said there were only 50 acres of land in the area currently needing irrigation.

Although Johnson is concerned over the use of irrigation water, he said the city has "done what they felt they had to do."

"They've been fair with us in the past," he said. "I hope we don't get into a full-fledged squabble over this."

Franklin Nielson, business manager of auxiliary maintenance at BYU and BYU's representatives on the Rock Canyon Water

Company's board of directors, said the company had contemplated selling its water rights to the city.

"We have noted that the city was interested," said Nielson.

BYU has used water from the company to irrigate property and is contemplating alternative uses for the water, said

Nielson.

Study, work alternate

Giving students a better feel for their chosen field of labor and first-hand experience with some are some of the goals of the BYU Co-op Educational program.

According to Cliff Barton, chairman of the study committee for the program, the university is pushing towards a strong Co-op internship educational programs.

Alternate work, school

In a presentation to help strengthen the BYU program, Robert L. Heyborne, dean of engineering at the University of the Pacific, Stockton, Calif., explained the success of their program to the Engineering Department.

Dean Heyborne said, "Students alternate periods of attendance at college with periods of employment while receiving pay and first-hand experience."

Benefits named

The benefits, Heyborne said, would include a well-rounded education, giving the student a better feeling for his life's work, establishing a good job reference with greater earning power.

He noted that students who participated in the Co-op educational program would advance at a rate six to nine years faster than those who were not a part of a Co-op educational program.

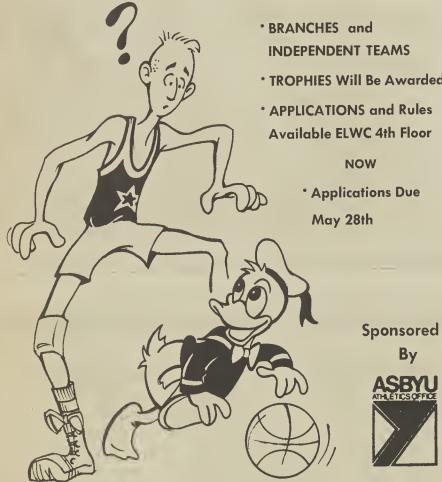

Heyborne added that one of the advantages of this program is the increase in student motivation, as a result of the connection between the job and academic work. With this outside exposure to the professional world the students bring back to the classroom up-to-date methods. He said this often makes for a more lively lecture period. Students teach each other and yet keep the professors on their toes.

One of the major drawbacks to the Co-op program is that it takes five years to get a B.S. degree.

LDS scholars organized

Society started

A new society has been established to promote research in the fields of languages and communication.

The Deseret Language and Linguistic Society is an internationally oriented organization formed by LDS scholars, said Dr. Melvin J. Luthy, associate professor of English and Linguistics at BYU and charter president of the new society.

Memberships open

He said membership is open worldwide to language and linguistics specialists interested in scholarly exchange of information with colleagues in these areas. He added that membership is not limited to LDS scholars.

Membership information can be obtained by contacting Dr. Dorothy M. Hansen, secretary-treasurer, Deseret Language and Linguistic Society, 240 B-34, phone 374-1211, ext. 4308. Both institutional and individual memberships are available.

"The society provides scholars with a formal organization for publishing their papers and for voicing their findings," said Dr. Luthy. He added an invitation to all interested persons to join.

The society is an outgrowth of the Languages and Linguistics Symposium, which has been sponsored by the BYU College of Humanities over the past six years, said the president.

Sponsor symposiums

The new society will assume major sponsorship of the symposium in collaboration with the college. Dr. Luthy added that the symposium attracts up to 200 scholars from around the world each year.

Dr. Hansen said the society will sponsor its symposium each year at the time of the LDS Church April Conference so conference visitors from around the globe can attend. The next

'Davy' play will begin

Heading the cast in BYU's upcoming production of "Davy Crockett: Or Be Sure You're Right" is 6 foot-6 Darrell Hansen, a sophomore from Orient majoring in nuclear engineering.

His leading lady, Eleanor, will be played by Mary Kay Pursel, a senior in consumer economics from Las Vegas, Nev.

Villains Oscar and Neil Crampton will be played by Randy Gleave and Lee G. Williams II.

Davy's mother, Dame Crockett, will be portrayed by Mitzi Anderson, said Dr. Charles Metten, chairman of the Department of Theater and Cinematic Arts.

Dr. Metten will be directing the play, which was written by Frank Murdoch. Walt Disney also adapted his popular version from this play.

The "zippin' 1872 American melodrama will run May 27-29 and June 1-5 at 8 p.m. in the Pardoe Theatre of the Harris Fine Arts Center. A family matinee will be May 31 at 4:30 p.m.

The play, complete with musical odes and entre acts, will cost $2.75 for general admission and $1.00 with a BYU activity card, said Dr. Metten.

Darrel Hansen protects Mary Kay Pursel from Randy Gleave in the BYU production of "Davy Crockett."

'Versatile' Y library addition should meet needs until 1980s

By RICHARD BEAN
University Staff Writer

The new library addition planned for completion in October should meet the present needs of BYU students and the university until the late 1980s.

According to Douglas P. Bush, assistant director of libraries for public services, the new addition will emphasize flexibility and versatility to help students improve study habits.

A committee of students and faculty has made extensive studies to ensure the new addition will meet the needs of those using the library, Bush added.

Library details

The new addition will more than double the current library floor space. Bush said the present building contains 205,000 square feet, the new portion will add 225,000 square feet. This will give approximately 500,000 seats for general study and additional group rooms.

A total of additional volumes will be housed in the new addition. The books are now being stored in south Provo and on campus, the assistant director said.

Orange-gold carpet will be laid throughout the entire library. It will keep the main floor, look better and be easier to maintain than hard tile, waxed floors, Bush said.

Lunchroom planned

Food may be obtained and eaten in the vending machine room. Tables will be provided where students may eat and visit, Bush explained. This is an experimental part of the library. If trash gets out of hand and if the problem with vermin mice and silver fish increases, the lunchroom will have to go, he said. The books are more important than the lunchroom, Bush observed.

There will be check-out points where students can get books at both the north and south ends of the library. This is for convenience of students using the library.

Bush noted that the reserve book area, not including periodicals, will move into the new building. Periodicals will be shelved in another part of the library.

The new addition is six stories tall. When completed it will look like part of the original, Bush said. The adjoining sections of the new building will contain a reference desk, public elevators and restrooms, Bush said.

One 'A' parking lot opens at 4

The A parking lot northwest of the Jesse Knight Building is open after 4 p.m. to all students with parking permits for any zone through spring and summer terms.

BYU Security Chief Robert Kelshaw announced Monday that a "survey" conducted by his department showed 175 parking stalls vacant after 4 p.m. in the lot.

He said the south gates to the lot will be closed at four and the North ones opened for the student parking. Faculty and staff cars in the lot after that hour will now have to exit from the North gate, he said.

South American journalists hear traveling Y professor

A Brigham Young University Professor recently delivered the opening lecture of the season to the Center for Comparative Studies in Buenos Aires, Argentina.

He is Dr. Edwin O. Haroldsen, professor of communications at BYU, now on leave as Fulbright lecturer in mass communications at the University of the West Indies, Kingston, Jamaica.

Dr. Haroldsen lectured and answered questions in investigative journalism from the United States for nearly three hours. The invitation-only audience included the three top military intelligence officials of the military government that deposed Isabel Peron as president of the country.

Earlier the same day, he participated in a roundtable discussion of U.S. journalism with top editors of the Buenos Aires newspaper La Opinion and launched with U.S. Information Service press officers and the Buenos Aires correspondents for Newsweek and U.S. News & World Report.

Dr. Haroldsen lectured also to journalism students at Catholic University in Santiago, Chile, and the Federal University of Rio Grande do Sul, in Porto Alegre, Brazil.

THE SIAMSE TWIN STEREO

Some things just separated. This is probably of stereo component.

Because of recent and recent economy moving parts more susceptible to and the need for equipment than the solid-state components such as amplifiers.

In most cases that of a "siamese twin" can buy if they were themselves and iron likely to fail to find quality components service companies.

Why then, are solid-state and components which include tape players, and amplifiers, why are these sold? The majority of people the "siamese twin" is simpler. Perhaps it's appropriate that a simple system from a company.

The main purpose of the Chamber is to provide people to help their choice without plain talk about some to help you get from one end to the other. Without excessive pay out your money for a "siamese twin" stereo. Sound Chamber. Is a better way.

University Education

Bilingual classes planned

WAYNE MADSEN
University Staff Writer

in Elementary classes will be procedure next fall classes of the Bilingual-Bi-

cultural Education Program.
The bilingual program,
according to Dr. James R.
Young, associate professor of elementary education, is a multi-disciplinary approach to training teachers who will be working with non-English speaking children.

Dr. Young said the need for bilingual teachers in the United States is great. "There are thousand to 100,000 Chicano educators and 2,000 Navajo educators are needed."

Applications for the program are available in 201 MCKB. Dr. Young said the minimum requirement for acceptance into the program is passing the language proficiency examination administered by the BYU Language Research Center and being enrolled in the BYU elementary education five-phase program.

According to Dr. Young, the present preparation for bilingual educators is adequate for teaching language skills and cultural proficiency. However, no emphasis has been placed on the methods needed for teaching subject matter.

In the new program, students will be trained not only in bilingual and bicultural skills but also in teaching elementary subject matter.

Dr. Young said the students will be placed in Spanish-and Navajo-speaking areas for practice teaching.

Universe photo by Leslie C. King

Dr. James R. Young; Steve Walston, candidate for program; and Carnes Burson, graduate assistant, prepare dialogue for bilingual children.

Twelve students are presently signed up for the Navajo classes. Most of the students, said Dr. Young, are returned missionaries who spoke the language on their mission or individuals whose mother language is Spanish or Navajo.

The four classes are the beginning of a Bilingual Bicultural Institute. According to Dr. Young, the institute would coordinate all sources available on campus that would aid in preparing bilingual teachers in many languages.

The church's contribution to growth will be discussed in religious, political, and cultural perspectives, Dr.
Allen said.

The role of the LDS
Church in United States history will be discussed Wednesday night at the Alumni College summer series.

Dr. James B. Allen, professor of history and assistant church historian, will be the speaker. He will relate the trends in American history to trends in church history.

The program will begin at 8 p.m. at the Alumni House.
Admission is $1.50 per person or by seasonal ticket.

Allen said there are five or six themes in American history that are also important to LDS history. He said that he will attempt to relate these themes.

Dr. Allen used as an example the relation between the worldwide impact of the church since it was organized and America's simultaneous worldwide expansion.

The church's contribution
to growth will be discussed in religious, political, and cultural perspectives, Dr.
Allen said.

Skills to be taught by crafts director

The new crafts director in the Hobby Center, ELWC, will begin teaching craft workshops June 1.

Hubbard, according to Elsie Oster, Hobby Center manager, Miss Peterson has taught crafts in the community for the past five years and has also worked in adult education programs in the Edgemont Elementary School.

She has had experience in dip-and-drape, all phases of ceramics, dry flower arrangements, corn husk dolls, macrame, candles, tole painting, party decorations and cake decorating.

Presently the only craft skills she is not qualified to teach are leather craft and copper craft.

Oster said that Miss Peterson will have a one-month training period when she will learn these skills and learn about her responsibilities and duties.

The hobby center is open to any BYU student or faculty member.

Bookworms, resource aids to be subjects of workshops

How to nurture bookworms and how to use resource materials in the classroom will be two of the topics discussed in five workshops planned by the Education Department.

The workshops are scheduled for June and July and are open to all interested persons, Dr. Floyd Sucher, chairman of the Elementary Education Department, said.

The first workshop, scheduled for June 14, will feature June Carlisle, retired BYU faculty member. Dr. Carlisle said the workshop is called "Development of Independent Learning Materials." Dr. Sucher and Mrs.
Carlisle will speak.

On June 8-11, the Educational Psychology Department will conduct a workshop entitled "The Joy of Teachers or How to Swin in the Marketplace," with Dr. Darwin Gale, chairman of the department.

Dr. Ray H. Barsh of the Graduate School of Education at Cal State University at Northridge will be the guest speaker, Gale said. Dr. Barsh is a leader in child education.
In 1974 he won the Milestone Award for his contribution in the area of learning disabilities, Gale said.

The final workshop, entitled "Innovative Practices in the Elementary School," will be
July 6-22, Dr. Sucher said.

The speaker will be Dr. Paul Huston,
assistant superintendent of the Birmingham,
Ala. Public Schools.

Two workshops are scheduled at the same time, June 21-25. The "Nurturing Bookworms Through Involvement," will feature Dr. Jo Stanchfield of Occidental College, according to Dr. Sucher.

Dr. Stanchfield is a national leader in reading programs for boys. She has also written a reading series for children in grades one through eight.

The second workshop to be held June 21-25, is sponsored by the Instructional Science Department, according to Dr.
Gardner Snow, area co-ordinator for Instructional Media.

Dr. Snow; Willard R. Card, assistant professor of instructional media at BYU; and Edward Jensen, co-ordinator of the College of Education Learning Resources Center, will speak at the workshop.

The final workshop, entitled "Innovative Practices in the Elementary School," will be
July 6-22, Dr. Sucher said.

The speaker will be Dr. Paul Huston,
assistant superintendent of the Birmingham,
Ala. Public Schools.

Lamanite will play movie role

N FELSHAW
Staff Writer

BYU Lamanite has selected to play the role of a movie to be shown this month in and Tracey, sophomore in nursing from Canada, Ariz., was chosen after a four-month, nationwide search to play the role of Joe Panther in a movie by the same name.

Tracey, who is not presently attending school because of the move, also starred in the "Great American Indian," produced by Keith Merrill. Merrill is a BYU graduate and an Academy Award recipient for his

American Cowboy."

"Joe Panther" is based on a novel of the same name by author Zacharia Ball.

"I wanted to try for the part because it was an excellent opportunity to gain some experience even if I didn't get it," said Tracey.

He spent five years with the Leo Russin family and one year with the Chaffin family before he was called as mission president to the New Zealand Mission.

"Tracey has worked to earn his success," said Mrs. Leo Russin. "I think it's because he likes talking to young Indians and would like them to be acknowledged that they could invite me to speak to them."

LDS Church background

A fullblooded Navajo, Tracey spent six years in Salt Lake City, where he participated in the Indian Placement Program at the LDS Church. He was student body vice president of Salt Lake High School in Salt Lake City.

As a youngster he hated to bring the Gospel to the Indian people through an acting career," said Tracey, "I like talking to young Indians and would like them to be acknowledged that they could invite me to speak to them."

The placement program helped me be more outgoing, and I was used to talking to white men a lot and it made filming and acting easier," said Tracey.

"Tracey has a believable and authentic quality about him," said Merrill.

When we began search for someone for "Great American Indian," we looked at Hollywood. We came to BYU too, and screened about two dozen people and Tracey was not among them," added Merrill.

"I just walked in to register for summer school and someone in the admissions center where Keith was screening asked me if I wanted to be in a movie," said Tracey.

"He did some reading for us and I was impressed with how natural he seemed," said Merrill. "So we held a meeting a few weeks later."

"There has been prejudice against me from the Indian community because of my success," said Tracey. "Some of them call me apple, 'red on the outside and white on the inside.'"

He will not let this hold him back, he added.

The youth disappeared Friday, but his attorney, Andrew McCullough, said Swasey appears to court in his Monday.

Swasey could stand trial for three felonies and six misdemeanors in connection with the raid.

"We've sent teletype statements to police departments all over the Western United States," Wink said. The Springville Police Department has already begun comparing the goods with recent burglary cases in that area.

He said three local BYU students were also being questioned in conjunction with the BYU Security Chief, Robert Kelshaw

one of the former students, suspended for using drugs, is being given a polygraph test and may also charged.

The raid was conducted by officers from the Utah State Criminal Justice Office.

Wink said Swasey and a girlfriend had been under surveillance for almost a month because of drug-related activities.

Lawmen raid Orem house, recover drugs, stolen items

By CHRIS JONES
University Staff Writer

A local task force headed by BYU Security Detective D. Clive Winn recovered $7,800 in what appeared to be stolen goods in a raid on an Orem residence yesterday night.

Winn said Monday that a furniture set valued at $1,400, a $250 silver serving set and a 1975 model motorcycle had been identified and returned to their owners.

"We strongly suspect that the rest of the merchandise was also stolen," said Winn. Numerous stereo speakers, automobile speakers and other items were also taken in car burglaries in the Orem City Police Department parking lot were included among the recovered items. A small amount of drugs were also found in the apartment.

Winn signed a complaint for the possession of a stolen motor vehicle before Judge Joseph Dimino of Orem City Court and a warrant was issued for the arrest of George Swasey, 19, 840 East 1550 S., Orem.

He said three local BYU students were

also being questioned in conjunction with the BYU Security Chief, Robert Kelshaw

one of the former students, suspended for using drugs, is being given a polygraph test and may also charged.

The raid was conducted by officers from the Utah State Criminal Justice Office.

Wink said Swasey and a girlfriend had been under surveillance for almost a month because of drug-related activities.

Women's talk series to reopen

The Women's Awareness Lecture series, sponsored by the ASBYU Women's Office, will start in June, according to Women's Vice Pres. Diane Curtis.

The lectures, which cover topics from politics to psychology and home management, are usually held on a weekday at 12 noon, although a specific time has not yet been set.

According to Debbie Hutchings, ASBYU Women's Vice Pres., the purpose of the series is to inform students on current issues and educate them on practical subjects.

Speakers last year included Janina Payne on the Equal Right's Amendment, Louise Bernier on the role of women in international Women's Caucus in Mexico City, and Dr. Frank Fox on the role of women in a changing culture.

Another lecture series, the Sunday night Eventides, has been discontinued, said Miss Curtis, because of conflict with church and school activities.

Student films wanted by U. area festival to run in June

Student-made films are now being accepted, the University of Utah sponsored Basin Film Festival.

"The festival gives students interested in film making a place to show their films and the public a place to see and judge," said festival coordinator Malcolm Draper.

This year's festival will be held June 3-4 in the Auditorium, Administration, will feature student films from BYU, Utah State University, Weber State, Southern Utah State College and the U. of U.

Winners of the event will be awarded prizes of cash and a top category for best show.

A first and second place prize will be awarded to category, according to Draper.

Communist Vietnam gets 1st cardinal

VATICAN CITY — Pope Paul VI gave Communist Vietnam its first cardinal Monday and at the same time blasted both rightist and leftist extremists in the Roman Catholic church.

The elevation of Archbishop Joseph Marie Trinh Nhieu Khu of Hanoi and also of Archbishop Laszlo Lekai of Hungary raised to five the number of cardinals from Communist countries. The others are Alfred Cardinal Bengsch of Berlin and Stefan Cardinal Wyszyński and Karol Cardinal Wojtyla of Poland.

Two Concorde touch down in U.S.

WASHINGTON — The first two Concorde to fly commercially into the U.S. touched down at Dulles International Airport Monday after beating the sun across the Atlantic. One came within 400 feet of colliding with a third aircraft, its pilot radioed.

The Dulles control tower had banned all flights from within 15 miles of the airport as the British Airways and Air France Concorde, flying only two minutes apart, neared the airport.

500 Israelis riot in Tel Aviv

TEL AVIV, Israel — About 500 Israeli rioters battled police with sticks, rocks, fire bombs, explosives and flames Monday in Tel Aviv, police said. The clash was sparked by a city hall order to tear down an illegally built factory in the Ezra district of the Hatikva slum.

Officials said about 300 policemen and paramilitary border guards were called out to quell the riot and two helicopters hovered over the scene.

Violation of probation denied by Dane, hearing scheduled

John Dane, former Provo resident and soldier of fortune, formally denied charges of probation violation Monday in Federal Court, District of Arizona.

Judge A. C. Muecke set Dane's hearing for 9:30 a.m. Friday.

Dane gained national attention several weeks ago when he appeared on a segment of CBS news' "60 Minutes." During the program he demonstrated his skill with firearms.

Dane was convicted in Phoenix, Ariz., last August for possession of explosives. Dane's four-and-a-half year probation was revoked for using firearms on the CBS program.

If convicted of probation violation, Dane could receive a four-and-a-half year prison term.

Sun Devils drop Y batters twice

A trip to Tempe turned into a sad occasion for BYU's baseball team, as it dropped two straight games to Arizona State, giving the Sun Devils the WAC baseball championship.

The Cougars were scheduled to play again Monday night in the runnerup series. The second game will be played today at 2 p.m. If a third game is necessary, it will be played tonight at 8 p.m. The games will be carried on KBYU-FM (88.9).

If BYU defeats the Wildcats, they are only assured of a possible invitation to the regionals at Edinburg, Tex., but if Arizona wins the series, on the basis of its 46-16 record, NCAA officials have told the schools they will go to the regionals.

The Cougars were humiliated in the two games with Arizona State, falling Thursday 13-4 and Friday 19-5.

In Friday's game, the powerful Sun Devils, ranked No. 1 in the nation, blasted 22 hits for the win, while the Cougars got nine hits. Pitcher Jack Morris held ASU to three runs over the first four frames, but the Devils exploded with 11 runs in the fifth and each in the sixth, seventh and six in the eighth. The Cougars scored two in the fifth and three in the eighth.

Morris, who held ASU to just seven hits in the earlier meeting, had the Riverside tournament, was replaced in the seventh inning by sophomore Dean Hall. Freshman Tyler Steinbach took over in the eighth.

The Cougar scoring began in the fifth on a single by catcher Mike Moss. Mark Romney then doubled to right field, advancing Moss to third, and Rob Buchanan blasted a hit and brought Moss and Romney in.

In the eighth, however, Steve Pollock singled and Kim Nelson walked. Moss followed with a walk, loading the bases. Then ASU freshman right-hander Mitch Anderson, scoring Pollock. Mark Romney hit to second for a double play at first and second. The next batter, Buchanan, singled to center field, scoring both runs.

Buchanan led the Cougars at the plate, going two for three with three RBIs, including a double. Paul Romney also belted two hits, while Vance Law, Rob Millsop, Pollock, Mark Romney and Moss each got one.

In the opening game of the series, ASU ripped two Cougar pitchers for 11 runs in the 13-4 victory. The Cougars got eight hits off winning pitcher Floyd Bannister, now 17-1 for the season.

BYU scored twice before Bannister retired anyone in the first inning. Paul Romney and Law singled and were doubled home by losing pitcher Millsop.

The Devils got three unearned runs in the second as the Cougars got a pair of hits, then scored three more in the fourth, in the fourth, one in the fifth and three in the sixth. Freshman Tom Morris took over the pitching duties in the fifth inning.

The Cougars seventh-inning scoring began with a long line down the third base foul line by Moss.

7 Cats named to WAC team

On the strength of a 10th consecutive WAC regular season baseball crown, the league's coaches voted Cougars to the divisional All-Conference team announced by the WAC offices.

The Cougars had one of two unanimous picks: pitcher Morris. Morris is 4-6 for the season, with a 3.91 ERA and 84 strikeouts.

The other unanimous selection was Wyoming center fielder Bill Estes, the national collegiate record holder for home runs in a single season (22).

Five men repeated on the team from 1975, including pitcher Rob Millsop, catcher Mike Moss with one error in 196 catches and first baseman Steve Pollock as Colorado State's first baseman Glenn Goya.

Newcomers to the team were Cougar Kurt Nelson of Utah Law as starters and outfielder Park Roman of Utah pitcher Gary Vincent and Rams Galen Kitama of Wyoming catcher Kirk Harris, and Rams Calen Rydell, both infielders.

Clinics set for youth basketball

Dates for four Cougar Basketball Camps for this summer have been announced by the BYU coaching staff headed by Frank Arnold.

Judged one of the outstanding clinics of its kind in the country, the five-day camps commence on four different dates: June 14, 21 and 28, plus the final one on Aug. 5.

"Not many schools in the country have the facilities we have here at BYU," said ass't. Coach John McMullen. "We plan to have the top in-state coaches available, plus some from out-of-state, help us this summer."

"We're offering a well-balanced program," he continued. "While we are stressing fundamentals, we will also provide plenty of competition."

Young men from age 11 through the junior year of high school may attend, and each participant in the camp will receive a basket ball.

The camp will run from five to eight hours each day. Most of the activities will be the RIBBLE program and the Smith Fieldhouse. The day will consist of individual and team fundamentals and scrimmages.

Officials for the camp, which is being sponsored by the Department of Physical Education at BYU, said food and housing accommodations are available, only to registered participants, for the term of the camp. All applications and fees must be received at least three weeks prior to the beginning date of each camp.

Requests for more information should be directed to General Services, LIDH, Brigham Young University, Provo, Utah 84602.

Former Cougar athlete named baseball coach

Gary Pullins, a product of Glen Tuckett's highly successful baseball program, has been named the new baseball coach at BYU.

The 32-year-old assistant coach at Arizona State becomes the seventh head baseball coach in BYU history and succeeds Tuckett, who is stepping aside after 13 division championships in 17 years to take over as BYU's Director of Intercollegiate Athletics on July 1.

"I am extremely happy with the appointment of Gary Pullins as baseball coach at BYU," said Tuckett.

"He is truly one of the most outstanding gentlemen ever to play and coach in baseball. It has been mutually agreed that Vernon can best serve the baseball program, the university, and the church by remaining in his present position."

A native of Glendale, Ariz., Pullins earned all-league and all-district honors in 1968 as the Cougars' second baseman.

The Utah Golden Spikers will play an exhibition game against the Irish team on Thursday at the Utah State Fair Grounds in Salt Lake. The $3 and $4 tickets are available from BYU soccer Coach Jim Dusara, ext. 3304 or 377-5050.

both the professional and college level. Pullins spent five years as a player and coach in the Los Angeles Dodgers organization, directed the BYU junior varsity team for a season, and was head baseball coach and athletic director for four years at Utah Technical College in Provo.

During the past year he has been an assistant coach at Arizona State, the nation's No. 1 ranked college team this spring. Pullins' primary area of responsibility is working with the infielers.

"My appointment is both exciting and challenging," says the new coach. "Glen has performed the past six years," continues the outgoing coach. "He is truly one of the most outstanding gentlemen ever to play and coach in baseball. It has been mutually agreed that Vernon can best serve the baseball program, the university, and the church by remaining in his present position."

The new coach is expected to begin his assignment next month when his obligations with Arizona State are complete.

After directing the BYU junior varsity in the spring of 1971, Pullins was hired that fall to start a baseball program at Utah Tech. His teams were involved in regional junior college playoffs the final two years.

"I've been looking forward to the time when I could be a part of BYU athletics again, and I look forward to working with Vern Law."

The Dodgers signed Pullins to a contract in the summer of 1972 and placed him at Daytona Beach, Fla. For the next two seasons he was player-coach at Bakersfield, Calif., and at Daytona Beach. He also coached the Ogden (Utah) Dodgers in the Pioneer Pullins' wife is the former Kathy Duke of El Paso, Tex. She was a BYU cheerleader when they met in Provo. They are the parents of two boys — Travis, 3, and Michael, 2, and are expecting a third child in October.

Athlete of Month award presented to BYU decathlete

On the strength of his WAC decathlon victory, the International Students Office has named Christy Lythell as its third International Athlete of the Month.

Lythell completely outclassed his WAC opponents in the decathlon three weeks ago, setting a new WAC record and a personal high of 7,542 points. He finished first in eight of 10 events and received second and third places in the other two.

The Swede finished third in the NCAA in 1975, sixth as a sophomore, and took first in the Texas Relays last December.

A native of public relations, Lythell is from Stockholm. He is married to the former Cheryl Charlton, also of Sweden.

Academic probation

The breaking point for academic probation and warning was set at 2.0 because that grade point level is required for graduation.

The 2.0 grade level is considered by most to be average, said MacArthur. The average grade point for BYU students of the 1974-75 academic year was 2.85, he added.

"Students with a grade point below 2.0 for the semester are put on academic warning and those with a cumulative grade point below that level are put on academic probation," continued MacArthur.

Students on academic probation are semesters bringing their grade point to the 2.0 level. "If the student's G.P.A. is still deficient, then academic suspension must be considered," he said.

Unusual circumstances such as serious illness or death in the family may warrant an exception.

Academic probation

"Currently it is a little more than five per cent," MacArthur added.

Entrance requirements
Higher entrance requirements allow quality students to filter through, which creates a greater competitive atmosphere," said MacArthur.

"The last few years the entrance standards have been higher because we can only admit a certain number and we want those students who would be most qualified," MacArthur added.

Entering BYU students average between the 50th and 54th percentile, compared to students of other major universities offering doctoral programs, added Robert Spencer, dean of Admissions and Records.

The average grade point of students entering BYU is 3.3 which is higher than other major universities.

There has been some concern also about how teachers are grading, MacArthur added.

Dr. Robert K. Thomas,
BYU associate professor of law, said, "We have encouraged instructors to be more accurate in their grading. There has been a general grade inflation in universities across the nation that has made us more sensitive to this concern."

MacArthur also pointed to this as a reason for the somewhat higher percentage of students currently on probation.

Family notification

According to the Family Right and Privacy Act, parents or guardians of the students placed on academic warning or probation cannot be notified.

"There are exceptions under the law, however," said MacArthur.

If a student is single, under 21 and a freshman, then it is possible to notify the parents or guardian, he continued. "Some universities are attempting to notify the student's parents because of lawsuit threats even if the student is in the exception category," said MacArthur. "We follow the student's parents."

Y computers teach students

By DALE EDWARDS
University Staff Writer

BYU students have the chance to learn mathematics and English by talking back to a computer. It's part of the TICCIT program, which stands for Telereactive Computer-Controlled Information Television. It was implemented at BYU in fall 1975, said David Hendrickson, supervisor of Graphic Services for the Institute for Computer Uses, said.

TICCIT (pronounced "ticket") uses modified color-television sets connected to a computer for exchanges between computer and student. It also uses video tape to produce moving pictures on a student terminal.

The BYU system is a self-contained system, Hendrickson said. The system utilizes automatic data recording. From this record, teachers can find out exactly how the student responded to a given question or problem, he said. Reports are made from this information for the instructor.

Another feature of the BYU system is the ease of changing the course material, Hendrickson said. Course material can be revised on day and changes can usually be seen the next day.

TICCIT is not intended to replace teachers, he continued. The students meet with the instructor once a week and the teacher can assign other work to be done without using the computer, he said.

The student uses TICCIT to improve his skills in a particular area. This allows the teacher to work on things which TICCIT can do, such as grading papers and tutoring students, Hendrickson said.

The student using TICCIT is shown rules or concepts, Hendrickson said. If the rule is too difficult to understand, the student can ask for easier explanations or examples. Practice questions to test his knowledge of a concept are available, the supervisor said.

A test is given at the end of each lesson, Hendrickson said. The object of the various segments of that lesson is to prepare the student for the test.

Full-time employee Margie Austin, Provo, demonstrates computer file used by students.

"The project was funded by the National Science Foundation," Hendrickson continued. "They approached the Mitre Corp., a non-profit group that develops new ideas and then passes them to marketing firms for commercial development," he said.

Finding this too difficult, they approached Dr. C. V. Bunderson of the University of Texas, Hendrickson said. In turn, he contacted the Instructional Psychology Department at BYU for consultation.

Eventually, Dr. Bunderson and several assistants came to BYU to closer to the work, Hendrickson added.

In the fall of 1973, a mathematics course was completed and the work of feeding it into the computer was begun, Hendrickson said. By the fall of 1975, the unit was completed and being used to teach BYU students.

Y students to use women's file

By JOY ROSS
University Staff Writer

A women's resource file and library being organized by the ASBYU Women's Office is expected to open for student use within the next month.

According to Women's Vice Pres. Diana Curtis, the resource file will contain a variety of information for women, information about issues like Title IX and the Equal Rights Amendment and information about topics such as day care, career education, health, self-defense, and social security.

All is included in the file will be speeches by Pres. Dallin Oaks about women, speeches given by prominent women, and a list of available women speakers in the area.

Miss Utah title sought by Y coed

An 18-year old honors student will represent the BYU Program Bureau in the Miss Utah pageant in Provo, June 10-12.

Singer Kimberly Amis, a sophomore from Bellevue, Wash., was chosen recently in the Miss Program Bureau contest from among women selected to represent the BYU Program Bureau—Young Ambassadors, Sounds of Freedom, Lamontine Generation, School of Express, the Goodtime Company, and the Swing Choir.

Selected as first attendant was Ellen Mathias, a junior from Porterville, Calif.; second attendant was Rayemette Boots, a junior from Ogallala.

Miss Amis, currently in general studies on an Honors Program academic scholarship, represented the Sunshine Express in the contest and will begin a week tour singing with the group throughout the South Pacific on USO tour beginning July 12.

Utah senior wins Y geology $

The first $1,000 George H. Hansen scholarship in geology at BYU has been awarded to a Fillmore senior.

David S. Wade, a senior at Millard High is the recipient, Dr. Jess R. Bushman, professor of geology, said. The scholarship will be given annually to an outstanding science student planning to enter the field of geology.

Wade is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Wade of Fillmore. He nearly a straight-A average in his high school work. He also participated in football, wrestling, and track and is president of the LDS Seminary at Millard High.

Dr. Bushman said the scholarship is named after Dr. Hansen, currently retired and residing in Orem, because he has spent much time visiting high schools encouraging young people to get a better understanding of geology and the physical world.

The Women's Office is working with information from national organizations, the members of the Utah State and Arizona State, and the women's studies at BYU in creating the resource center. "There's been a lot of research going on; it's a national issue right now," said Miss Curtis, in explaining the need for the file.

Miss Curtis pointed out that previous information that came into the office was only seen by the Women's Vice President. The file, she said, will circulate these materials to the student file.

The resource file will be operated on a check-out basis. Students who want to borrow materials will be able to keep them, after properly checking them out, for a flexible length of time, depending on how much in demand they are, said Miss Curtis.

The women's library will be created from donations of books from women who are willing to write their comments about the book in the front leaf. Like the materials in the resource file, the books will mostly be concerned with women's issues.

The library and resource file both will be housed in the Women's Office on the fourth floor of the ELWC. Miss Curtis said she hoped the library could expand and be built to the point that it could eventually be housed as a special collection in the Harold Library.

The creation of the resource file and library fulfill one of Miss Curtis' campaign promises in this spring's elections.

Rehabilitation Center to replace County Jail

By STEPHEN J. STIRLING
University Staff Writer

Next to Interstate 15 in the Southwest corner of Provo stands a dilapidated, weathered building which almost blends into the dusty lot surrounding it.

The structure, whose finer features have long since been chipped away at time, was originally a railroad pumphouse when it was constructed 80 years ago.

The worn printing on the small metal entrance is barely legible, but with effort one may read the words, "Utah County Jail."

This battered sign offers symbolic punctuation to the conviction of many a law enforcement official in the area that Utah county is in desperate need of a new jail. That need, after 40 years, is finally on its way to satisfaction as the construction of a new jail complex begins today.

Rehabilitation Center

The new County Rehabilitation Center, as it will be called, originated as an organization seven years ago when law enforcement officers recognized the need for a new jail.

"The county jail has served its purpose," says Mack Holley, Utah County Sheriff. "But it is no longer. We've tried to keep the jail for years in this country."

The facility, originally constructed by Union Pacific in 1896, was purchased by the county in the 1930s and remained to serve until 1967.

Before that, the old jail was located at the sheriff's home, which stood behind the County Building.

'Patchwork' jail

The "Patchwork" jail consisted of four 18- by 24-foot "tanks," so designated because of their walls of concrete and panels of corrugated steel. Light prisoners shared each cell and slept on steel-beds built with thin mattresses.

Three cramped niches contained a shower, a basin and a toilet, while two sides of the walls were made of bars. Those were the unsatisfactory conditions of the county jail 40 years ago—the same conditions which exist today.

The jail's major shortcomings, however, are a lack of facilities for adequate prisoner rehabilitation and its incapacity to satisfy Utah law, particularly codes of prisoner segregation and health standards.

"Judges have jokingly threatened to condemn the jail as being unfit to house prisoners," said Sheriff Holley, "but we would still pass the building inspection."

'Dungeoning' unlawful

In other states, however, increased filing of lawsuits for such conditions have been no laughing matter. In Alabama, for example, a U.S. district court in January of this year ruled that "dungeoning" incarcerations constitute cruel and unusual punishment" and threatened to close jails in which such conditions were not adhered to.

When the state legislature failed to take the least step toward correction, the court prohibited further incarceration of new prisoners in those jails, prison doors were closed.

In Utah, government grants may help to alleviate that alternative. But still, according to Run Fullmer, an instructor of law enforcement and criminology at BYU, "Local corrective institutions are a sorry mess in this state."

Fullmer, who in 1969 submitted a master's thesis entitled "Regional Jails in Utah," stated that the 46 county jails in the state operate under poor living conditions.

Bond defeat

The citizens of Utah County bypassed the need of new facilities five years ago when a bond election for a jail annex was defeated two to one. According to Jerry Wood, administrator of the County Commission, the public was uncertain about its willingness to connect a jail directly onto the County Building, in the middle of Provo.

After the defeat, the circumstances, the bond was crushed and the county was left with little other recourse than to continue with a grossly inefficient jail until the federal government's new revenue sharing funds became available, and toiled together with the resources of the county's capital improvement funds.

With the state legislature failing to take the least step toward correction, the court prohibited further incarceration of new prisoners in those jails, prison doors were closed.

"People seem to think a jail is supposed to be this way," says John Carlson, Corrections Coordinator of the jail.

Carlson, who is in charge of rehabilitation for the county jail, feels that punishment per se is a poor form of behavior modification. "This environment," he says "produces violence, which then contributes to a grossly inefficient jail until the government's new revenue sharing funds become available, and toiled together with the resources of the county's capital improvement funds.

Wrong impressions

"People seem to think a jail is supposed to be this way," says John Carlson, Corrections Coordinator of the jail.

Carlson, who is in charge of rehabilitation for the county society which put him there, will also have 150 cells, as opposed to four, which will house two prisoners each.

Jail improvements

The new jail will be located at the Valley Care Center for the aged in Southeast Provo, will eliminate many problems caused by the older facility, said Kenneth Cahoon, chief deputy sheriff.

The major improvement will be the separation of maximum, medium and minimum security levels of incarceration which range from inmates on work and school release to those prisoners considered to be a threat to the point of endangering public safety.

The Rehabilitation Center will also have 150 cells, as opposed to four, which will house two prisoners each.

The general contract for construction of the new jail has been awarded to Broderick and Howell Construction Co. of Orem, with a low bid of $114,700.

Construction is to begin in mid-November, 1977.

New combination locks installed in law library

By COLLEEN SCHULTHIES
University Staff Writer

While a student may not need a password, he does need a combination to get in and out of some of the floors at the Clark Law School Library.

A new lock system called AlphaLock has been installed on the first, second and fourth floor doors that lead to the library. The new system was installed for book security, according to Richard S. Johns, administrative assistant of the Law Library.

Ten buttons are on the sides of the doors, both inside and outside. When a combination is first entered, the catch remains open for a few seconds and then locks again.

The available combinations are obtained from a computer printout. The circulation librarian selects the combination and the locks are changed manually.

The combination is changed once a month now, but Johns said the frequency will change to weekly in the fall and winter semesters. "We could change it every hour if we wanted to do that," Johns said.

The doors that have the lock system are intended to be used by law school students, faculty and staff so the combination is only given out to someone who can prove it is one of the above. Circulation librarians give out the combination to those qualifying.

For undergraduate students and visitors to the library, there is another entrance and another new security system. The Checkpoint System is similar to that in the Lee Library. Gates have been installed at the entrance of the library on the third floor. When a student goes through the gate with a book, a bell goes off.

The beeping sound is caused by an electronic circuit that has been inserted into the flyleaves of the books. When a book is checked out, tape is placed over the circuit to neutralize it.

"The two systems are totally separate and were married for the purposes of book security," Johns said. Approximately $3,000 worth of Johns said they will pay for themselves in one year.

He said the library has about 150,000 volumes averaging $25-$30 a volume.

They have had some book loss, Johns continued, and he hopes the new systems will curb it.

Maintenance of the system does not seem to be a problem. Grant Clement, supervisor of the Electrical Shop, does not anticipate much maintenance and Johns said he feels there is enough expertise on campus to do any needed maintenance.

educational than punitive, according to Miss Murphy. "Someone picked up for smoking as a minor might be asked to do a report of the ill effects of tobacco by the council," she explained.

Lt. Duane Fraser, head of the Provo Police Department Detective Division, said the threatened program has handled most of the status offenses those that are a direct result of the offender's age. Smith and Frazier said that the top two offenders are two of the most frequent offenders.

With the anticipated cutback, "the same number of youths may be handled ultimately, but it will bog down the system," Frazier said.

The Youth Council procedure also keeps criminal offenses off juvenile records in a first arrest situation.

Provo Police Chief Sven Nielson said the department will have to investigate other community sources. But the way things look, juvenile offenders in the future will either have to go through the juvenile court system or they won't be dealt with at all."

"I think the Youth Council has been a highly successful program and I'll be extremely disappointed if we have to discontinue it," Nielson said.

President visits with educators

President Gerald Ford

feted his visit to the LDS Church Education Week faculty and their families on the White House south grounds last week when they were in the nation's capital to conduct sessions of conference.

Following a tour of the White House, the group was met by Dr. David C. Hoopes, a BYU alumnus and special assistant to the President. He visited the south grounds where they were greeted and visited briefly with President Ford as he left the Oval Office.

The group also had breakfast with Utah Senators Frank Moss and Jake Garn and Reps. Gun McKay and Allan Howe.

With 175,000 volumes, the BYU Law Library ranks about 25th in the 150 to 160 academic law libraries in the nation, according to the law library director.

David A. Thomas, assistant professor and law librarian at the J. Reuben Clark Law School, says that in addition to the 175,000 volumes, there is roughly the equivalent of that in microfilm.

There are probably one of the leading advocates of microfilm in law libraries, Thomas says.

Thomas, who received his B.A. in Political Science from BYU and his law degree at Duke University Law School, said that the library's initial growth has slowed down now to about 10,000 to 20,000 volumes a year. Last year 45,000 volumes were added to the library.

The library offers a number of services to its users, he said. They have individual carrels, well-organized circulation and reference files, audio-video resources, books routing and purchasing for faculty members, acquisition on request, and an intercom on each floor to the reference desk. "We'll install a telephone next year," he said, "which will connect us with the most highly developed law research system by national hook-up," Thomas said.

To help students who are not familiar with the law library building and system, there are tape tours, maps available and a staff willing to answer questions.

The law library is open from 6 a.m. to midnight. Thomas emphasized that non-law students should use the tables in the library to study at, and not the carrels, since they are assigned to individual law students.

BYU's law library is the only official law library in the church. "We have a broad view of the mission of the law library that goes beyond serving just the law students— even though that's its primary mission," Thomas says.
